

Service-Learning Workshop For Graduate Students

Add service-learning to your teaching toolkit.

Service-learning is when instructors use community service to teach course concepts. It allows students to build skills and understanding beyond the classroom, and it helps them become engaged members of their communities.

All graduate students are welcome. You do not have to be a TA to participate.

Participants will choose a course and bring a syllabus to redevelop with service-learning as a key teaching strategy. Participants should plan to attend all three sessions: October 11, 18, and 25 from 5:30 pm to 6:30 pm in the Student Services Building.
